

JSPS International Fellowships
Global Forum
Mori Arinori Institute for Higher Education and Global Mobility

Who is to Pay for Mobile Students?
Changes in Higher Education Finance in an Age of Global Mobility

Date: December 10th (Tuesday), 2019

Place: Special Meeting Room #102, Hitotsubashi Hall, 2-1-2 Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo

Access: <https://www.hit-u.ac.jp/hall/accessen.html>

16:00~18:00pm

Presentation by Marcel Gérard (UCLouvain, Louvain-la-Neuve, Belgium)

Discussion by Yukari Matsuzuka (Institute for Higher Education and Global Mobility, Hitotsubashi University)

Questions and Answers

Due to the increasing mobility of students and young graduates, a country that invests much in the education of its youth, becomes more likely to evolve successfully in our global community of people, than a country which just take into account monetary return. That potentially changes the structure of public finances, particularly in higher education. In that forum, we discuss changes and challenges in education finance in an age of global mobility, by inviting Professor Marcel Gérard who leads economic studies in higher education, and who has also delivered papers with political implications for education finance that cope with mobile students and workers.

For question, please write at y.matsuzuka@r.hit-u.ac.jp.

*This seminar is organized through JSPS International Fellowships for Research in Japan for FY 2019 (Grant No. S19137), co-sponsored by Mori Arinori Institute for Higher Education and Global Mobility, Hitotsubashi University.